"The South 40"

We have some beautiful weather last week for plowing and gardening. Saturday I prtuned, fertilized, sprayed for weeds and mulched.

If you haven't tackled these jobs, it's time to get them done. First of all, check the equipment -- is the prunning equipment sharp and well oiled -- has the spray equipment been cleaned -- better check those gaskets, they may need to be replaced. What about the supplies? Are there enough of the right kinds to do the job?

Apples, grapes, peaches, pears, and raspberries need to be pruned. We have several leaflets that describe in simple words and pictures how to prune correctly. Once you get started, don't neglect the evergreen shrubs -- they need pruning, also.

Fertilizing backyard fruits needs to be adjusted to the kind of fruit, its age and root stock. Grapes generally need nothing more than nitrogen. Use 4 oz. of 16 nitrogen on mature vines.

Raspberries that recieve 1/2 a pound of 16% nitrogen per 100 ft. of row are adequate. When higher rates of fertilizer are applied, yield and quality are reduced.

Asparagus need to be fed, in about three weeks they will be coming into production. 800 pounds per acre of a 10-10-10 seems about right for this area. This application should be split. Apply one-half now and the remainder following the last harvest. If my calculation is correct about 20 pounds of 10-10-10 per 75' of row is in the hall park for now and again in June.

Apple fertilization depends upon whether you're feeding standard trees or semi-dwarfs. Standard trees should receive 5 oz. of 16% nitrogen for each year of growth.

Semi-dwarf trees will need only one pound of 10-10-10 per tree.

It's easy to over fertilize pear trees and we end up with a lot of tender growth and with this comes fire blight.

These are all guides and soils vary widely, If terminal growth is inadequate or leaves show yellow coloring, you probably need additional fertilizer.

There are certainly times when you'll need phosphorus and potash and don't forget the lime. Here's where you'll want to take a soil test and correct the deficiencies.

* * *

The fire-cured market closed last week; 6,805,525 pounds sold for an average of $52.31. Average prices were up from $46.86 a year ago. Poundage was also up about 700,000 pounds.

* * *

There were a lot of tobacco growers that used Di-Syston last year with good results. Note: This year it is being formulated in 15% grambles. It'll take considerably less to do the job. We just can't over-emphasize the idea of "Read the Label."

* * *

Feeder cattle prices are surely some where near an all-time high. If you are selling now, just be sure you know the market and get what these cattle are worth.

The Spring Feeder Sale is set for Thursday, April 9. Nomination forms are available from this office.

Correction

Two names were incorrect in the front page story of the 50th anniversary of the Appomattox Investment Club. The late Charles Thomas was an original member, not the late Senator Charles Thomas Moses, as printed and instead of T. E. Evans, the article should have included T. DeWitt Evans. The Times-Virginian regrets these errors.
